

2024 Summary advice for schools on Ramadan

Adapted by Camden SACRE from an original document from Newham SACRE

The following advice is taken from 'A briefing paper on Ramadan' Published January 2024

- In Camden we have four main denominations/groups of Muslim people – Sunni, Shi'a, Ismaili and Ahmadiyya. The vast majority of Muslim pupils in our schools are Sunni. All groups of Muslims use the same Qur'an, but there are differences in the way they practice their religion. In Camden where we have Muslim people from a variety of continents and countries these differences are cultural as well as scriptural/doctrinal, at times. Knowing a Muslim family's heritage can help a school understand differences in the ways in which individuals practice their religion, and understand that not all Muslims will all do exactly the same thing.
- Fasting (sawm) during the twenty-nine or thirty days of Ramadan is one of the basic duties of Islam for all Muslim people. These duties for Sunni Muslims are called 'pillars' in that they support and strengthen a Muslim's life as do pillars in a building. The other pillars for Sunni Muslims are: the declaration of faith, prayer/worship five times daily, paying a portion of wealth to charitable causes and making the pilgrimage to Makkah once in your lifetime. Fasting is the fourth pillar and is seen as an act of worship. For Shi'a Muslims fasting is one of the ten obligatory acts they must follow, and this is also true for Ahmadiyya Muslims.
- In 2024 Ramadan will run between 10/11th March and 9/10th April.
- During the daylight hours of Ramadan, adult Muslims are to refrain from eating, drinking (including water) and sexual activity. It is a time when they try to be even more aware of Allah (Arabic word for 'One God'). Muslims will also try to live a better life generally during Ramadan – by trying not to use bad language or think ill of others and give time to reflect on their life before Allah.
- There are variations in timing of Ramadan due to geographical location and often in Camden depending on which country's timings Muslim people follow. Timetables showing when daylight begins and ends during each day of Ramadan are published by Muslim communities and can be found on-line.
- Fasting during Ramadan binds the Muslim community (Ummah) together, both locally and world-wide.

What does the Qur'an say?

"Fasting is prescribed for you as it was for those before you, so that you may be conscious of Allah." (2:183)
"But he who is ill or on a journey shall fast a similar number of days later on. Allah desires your well-being, not your discomfort." (2:185) "Ramadan is the month in which the Qur'an was sent down, as a guide to mankind. So, any [one] of you who is present (in his home) during that month should spend it in fasting." (2:185) "Eat and drink until the white thread of dawn appears to you distinct from the black thread, then complete your fast until the night appears." (2:187)

At what age are children expected to start observing the Ramadan fast?

Shari'ah (Islamic law, based on the Qur'an and the practice of the Prophet) states that fasting during Ramadan is only obligatory from the age of puberty. It is natural, however, that Muslim children will wish to emulate their elders and so, from an early age, Muslim children will often fast for one, two or more days during Ramadan. They will be proud of this and their elders will express pleasure. A competitive spirit will often develop between children in that they will compare the number of days on which they have fasted with others, and this is something that elders will educate them against. The level of observance among children, of course, will depend upon the particular individual, family or community. Muslim parents are very mindful about the impact of fasting on younger children and would normally encourage weekend fasting at home, when they can rest and perform prayers with their wider family.

What is the responsibility of a school if a pupil becomes ill or suffers as a result of fasting while at school?

The responsibility which a school should exercise towards fasting pupils is no different to that applying to any pupil in the school. A school will obviously want to be sensitive towards pupils who are fasting, but Muslim scriptures are clear that if you are not able to operate normally (at school or work), you are not well enough or old enough to be fasting. Fasting is something that no-one should really know about – it should not affect your normal daily life.

Given that the obligation to fast does not override health considerations, a pupil who faints can be offered water if judged appropriate by a suitably qualified first-aider or if the pupil requests it. In the same way if a pupil cannot concentrate or becomes listless at school, a drink and food should be given. Before any fasting starts the school should ask parents to take responsibility to inform school if the child is fasting and school can use that opportunity to inform parent that they will take actions if child is unwell, lethargic etc If the intention is to fast, even if it is broken then the day still starts and a Muslim pupil might need to be reassured that this is the case.

Are there any other parts of the curriculum for which Ramadan has implications?

As well as the month of Ramadan being a time of fasting, it is also a period when Muslims try to be even more conscious of God and to lead better lives. Undoubtedly, the Muslim community would appreciate and respect a sympathetic and understanding stance by schools during the month of Ramadan. In turn, most schools would have as one of their underlying values respect for the family backgrounds from which children come.

Relationships education might be covered in Year 5 & 6 during Ramadan, and schools might want to move this component to after 21st April so it does not clash with Ramadan or handle topics with sensitivity. Schools should consider the needs of any Muslim teachers who might be required to teach this element of the curriculum at a time when their religion asks them not to think about such matters. Even if pupils are not fasting they might be uncomfortable with thinking about sexual matters during Ramadan or parents may find it difficult to talk through issues with their children or come to a school meeting about these lessons, so please bear this in mind.

Should a school make special provision during Ramadan?

This is a matter for a school's discretion but the following may be considered:

- being aware of the impact of Ramadan on meetings for parents (in that Muslim parents may find attendance at such meetings difficult because of involvement in practices associated with Ramadan);
- dedicating specific assemblies to Ramadan so that the whole school community can learn about its place in Muslim life; as well as considering fasting in different religions.
- arranging a meeting with Muslim parents prior to Ramadan to discuss issues such as lunchtime arrangements, examinations or sporting activities, and
- writing a letter to Muslim parents prior to the month of Ramadan. So, parents can notify the school if their child will be fasting and ensure them to ensure their child eats a nutritious pre-dawn meal before commencing the fast.
